GIANT LEAPS

BREAKING through BARRERS with small steps and giant leaps

Just as the football team breaks through the sign before going up against their opponents on the field, all Holmes students must break through barriers, with both small steps and giant leaps, while working toward their individual goals.

"One small step for man, one giant leap for mankind."

These were the famous words spoken by Neil Armstrong as he walked across the face of the moon. This phrase applies to us as students of Holmes Community College.

We each have graduated from high school, even though it might have been a "few" years back, and have made that BIG decision to attend college.

Many of us are involved in various clubs and activities Holmes offers us. Sometimes we seem to become overloaded with things to do and neglect our studies. These are small steps and giant leaps as well. Each decision, whether small or large, whether to study for Chemistry or Physics first, or even whether to play volleyball or football, has an impact on our lives. You see, Holmes Community College is full of small steps and giant leaps. Each campus offers many wonderful opportunities. You just have to get involved with what is given to you.

This year Holmes has taken numerous giant leaps, including Alexander Tsema, who will be coaching our future track team. He is currently serving as the Goodman Campus Intramural Sports Coordinator. Holmes has also added a ladies' softball team which is being headed up by Dan Edwards, who also serves as the District Coordinator/Supervisor of Grounds.

Also added to the Goodman Campus is the Skill Tech Center. Its purpose is to train workers for what the industry needs and wants. The company descides what our Skill Tech coordinators need to offer their employees, such as adult education classes like GED, as well as how to run an expensive saw that helps to create manufactured homes. These classes usually last for twelve clock hours and are taught by teachers who meet the requirements of the state of Mississippi. This program is state funded and in turn these funds are given to the Community College Board to distribute to each community college that is involved.

New to our Ridgeland Campus is our Plastics Technology class. These students will be providing us with a finished plastic-injected product that they will be making from scratch to finish. Mississippi spends thousands of dollars producing plastic products, but coaster with our Holmes logo on it and remember one of your fellow students helped make it.

The Grenada Center has also made a change in their class schedules, with chemistry classes added to the roster of day classes.

Holmes has made a great deal of changes that I consider giant leaps, but Holmes has also taken a few small steps as well. The District Administration Building on the Goodman Campus is getting a face-lift. Not only is the District Administration Building getting a face-lift but the Lorance Center has been greatly improved with an enlarged bookstore area and other expansions. We are also adding a softball field that will be ready next year for our ladies' softball team.

whose structural damage made refurbishment un feasible, and use the materials to build a chapel. Also on the Goodman Campus the Science and Mathematics building will be expanding with a bell tower as the main entrance. The Ridgeland Campus will be adding science labs for all combined science classes to use.

On July 20, 1969 Neil Armstrong made his unforget table speech while he walked across the moon. Each ous know these words— "One small step for man one giant leap for mankind."

We each have taken many small steps throughout our lifetimes, and we will be taking a few giant leaps over the rest of our years. Choosing to attend Holmes Community College was the first of many small steps and giant leaps taken as a student here, with many more to come as individuals, as a class and as a college.

The Goodman Campus was kept abuzz over the summer with the sounds of saws, hammers and concrete being poured into place. The renovations made the Lorance Student Center more accessible to students, enlarged the bookstore and make the area brighter with the addition of a glass atrium.

DEDICATION

Janice and Gene Richardson

The sense of commitment to Holmes Community College, its staff students and alumni, that Janice and Gene Richardson have displayed on a daily basis over the many years they have been associated with the institution have made the two an essential part of the college. And anyone who has encountered either of them has been met with a smile and left with the most pleasant of impressions.

When Janice Richardson first began working for Holmes, it was as a business and office technology instructor. She became the Single Parent/Displaced Homemaker Coordinator in November of 1987 and a vocational counselor in 1992.

Gene Richardson came to Holmes as the Director of Admissions and was named Director of Admissions and Records in 1984.

Both graduates of Holmes, the Richardsons each hold a bachelor's degree from Mississippi State University and a master's degree from Mississippi College. Janice also has an education specialist degree from Mississippi State University.

The Richardsons make their home in Kosciusko. They have three sons, Brent, who now lives in Jackson; Brady, a sophomore here at Holmes; and Breck, a student in Kosciusko.

It is with sincere appreciation for their many years of dedication and service to Holmes Community College that this yearbook, the 66th edition of Horizons is dedicated to Janice and Gene Richardson.

n the years since Dr. Starkey A. Morgan Sr. became the president of Holmes Community College, many improvements have been made in the campus, campus life and quality of education at the college.

The physical improvements on the Goodman Campus are easy to distinguish.

The renovations on the Lorance Student Center and the District Administration Building are complete. The student center's renovations have increased the size of the bookstore and made the flow in and out of the grill easier. The addition of the glass atrium has made the open area containing the pool tables and the dining area larger, brighter and a more pleasant place for students to congregate.

The renovations in the District Administration Building include a new heating and cooling system, new paint and carpeting and the addition of windows to many offices. The building is now both impressive to visitors coming to Holmes for the first time and a more enjoyable office area to those working in the building.

The architectural drawings for a Technology Center have already been completed, with construction scheduled to be finished in January 1996. Designed to accommodate computer classes and other classes associated with computer technology, the 9,500 square foot facility will house three teaching labs, a lecture room and three faculty offices. A canvas canopy will cover a walkway connecting the center to the Science-Math Building.

The building's courtyard will serve as the focal point for persons enter the campus off Highway 14. The courtyard will accentuate another unique feature, a bell tower. Completely computerized, in the spirit of the building of which it is a part, the tower's bells will chime on a regular basis. The system will also provide music for the campus at various times during the day and on special occasions.

On the Ridgeland Campus, a plastics technology program has brought yet another facet to technical offerings which keep Holmes on the cutting edge. Within the first semester of the program, the plastics technology students and their instructor, Tracy Warren, teamed up with the machine shop students, with their instructor Dewey Ables, to produce a finished plastic-injected product from scratch to finish.

The machine shop students produced the "tool," the machine-graded steel mold into which the plastic is injected. The plastics technology students then used the tool to manufacture the coasters. With more than 140 manufacturers using either plastic injection, extrusion or both processes in the production of plastic products, there is a lot of interest in the program.

A Skill/Tech Center serves the needs of the industries and workers in the nine counties in Holmes' district through training and skill enhancement. Based on a company's needs, the Skill/Tech coordinators can offer their employees classes ranging from adult basic education to using a specific tool or machine. Lynn Wright, formerly a marketing and management technology instructor as well as the co-op coordinator for Holmes, serves as the director of the Skill/Tech program. The program is state-funded and administered through the Mississippi Community College Board.

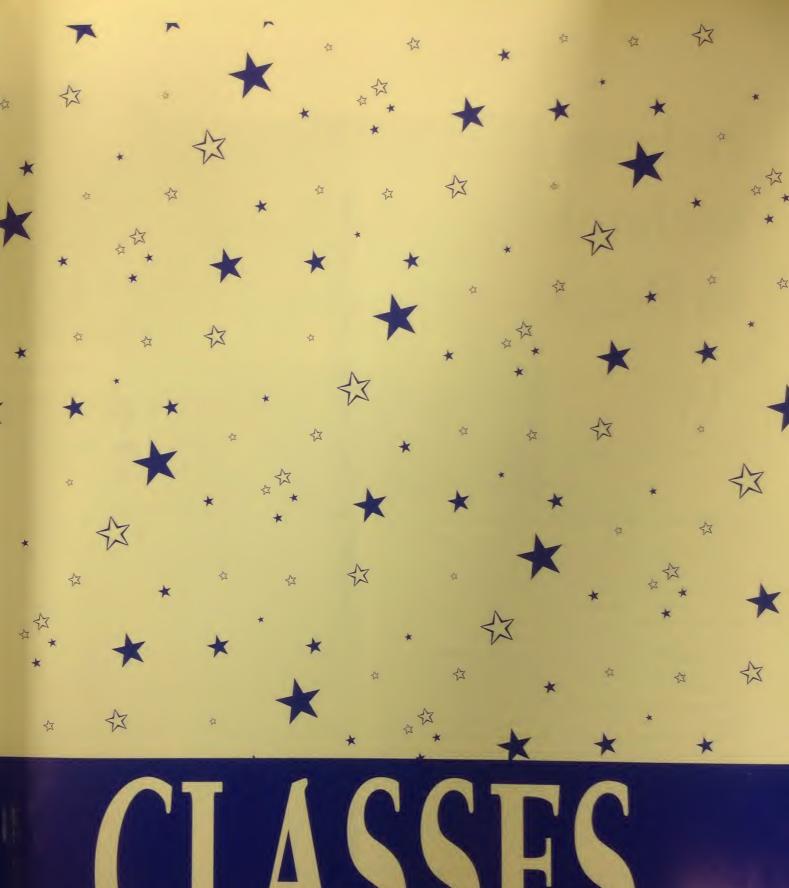

The Grenada Center's Work-Based Learning Program, under the direction of Grenada native Martha Cofer, is a curriculum that blends classroom instruction with work-site experiences for students enrolled in the vocational/technical programs.

The Work-Based Learning component helps to bridge the gap between post-secondary education and work. Work-Based Learning is an industry driven program created by "The School to Work Opportunities Act" effective last May. One of the main objectives is to build partnerships locally, statewide, and nationally among schools, employers, labor and the community.

Holmes Community College, under the leadership of Dr. Starkey A. Morgan Sr., continues to be a vital part of central Mississippi, helping its students as well as the nine counties in its district to take both small steps and giant leaps toward the 21st century.

Holmes adds plastics technology program to Ridgeland offerings e've all heard and seen those commercials on the radio and television sponsored by the Plastics Council. You know the ones. They remind us of the many small and giant ways plastic products make a difference in our lives.

Just imagine trying to go through a whole day without coming into contact with plastics. Imagine not drinking out of plastic cups, not using the telephone or computer, not driving your car, not watching television or listening to the radio.

Seems impossible, doesn't it?

But thanks to a program which was launched on the Ridgeland Campus of Holmes Community College this fall, you need only imagine such a life. You won't actually have to live it. In case you were wondering what this miracle program is, it is a plastics technology curriculum.

The students enrolled in the program learn the processes of plastics injection and plastics extrusion while at Holmes and then use this knowledge when they enter the work force to create products which make all of our lives easier and safer. With over 140 manufacturing operations in Mississippi alone which use such processes, the students completing the program should have no problem in locating a job in which to use their skills.

Like other students enrolled in the vocational and technical programs at Holmes, the plastics technology students do not have to wait until joining the work force to put the knowledge they have gained into practice.

The machine shop students along with instructor Dewey Ables teamed up with the plastics technology students and instructor Tracy Warren to produce a beverage coaster.

The machine shop students produced the "tool," the machine-graded steel mold into which the plastic is injected. The plastics technology students then used the tool to manufacture the coasters. This production of a finished plastic-injected product from start to finish was a first for students, in or out of the state.

The ribbon-cutting ceremony featured an address given by Jimmy Heidel, Mississippi Department of Economic and Community Development director; as well as remarks given by Holmes alumnus J.A. Hemphill Sr., Mississippi Polymer Institute associate director.

An industry trade show also coincided with the ribbon-cutting ceremony. Plastics Systems, Inc., in Atlanta, Ga., and WMI Corporation, from Greenville, S.C., displayed their lines of ejection and extrusion support equipment for the benefit of students and the state's plastic manufacturers. Ram Electric and Irby Lighting also contributed to Holmes' efforts in providing facilities the show.

So the next time you pick up something plastic, think about the students on the Ridgeland Campus who are learning how to make some of those things that make our lives easier.

Holmes travels information superhighway with star photos

by Chris Lewis

Yome of Holmes' students set their sights on athletics; other focus on music or English departments. But recently more and more of Holmes students have been setting their sights on the heavens and focusing on the stars. This all began with Holmes' first observatory, dedicated on April 9, 1992. It is used for student research, teaching, and public astronomy education.

The Holmes faculty believes student research is an essential component of science education, although community colleges are primarily teaching institutions. Observational astronomy, especially photoelectric photometry of variable stars, provides students with the opportunity to learn the methods of science while working on projects of real scientific value.

In the spring of 1987, Holmes Community College offered a course in astronomy (PHY 1113, Astronomy) for the first time in its 62 year history. Since its beginning, the course has been laboratory based with great emphasis placed on student observations of the sky. There are three things the current observatory is used for: 1) To present astronomy course PHY1113 Astronomy, with lab as a requirement; 2) helps students to do independent research, and 3) to accommodate outside groups such as elementary schools, junior and senior high schools, and some universities.

Astronomy instructor Michael Burchfield said, "The primary interest is getting students to do research for astronomy class and research on variable stars."

Holmes is now expanding the opportunities for the students to observe heavenly bodies with the addition of another observatory. The observatory is a two story, brick structure approximately four meters in diameter topped with a four meter, aluminum dome. It houses a Celestron c-14 telescope which is 14 inches in diameter.

The observatory dome is a kit made of fiberglass. The dome is 10 feet in diameter. It was built by Wirt Hayes, director of financial aid; Kevin Martin, physics instructor, Ridgeland Campus; Michael Burchfield, biology and astronomy, Goodman Campus; Luther Boggan, math instructor, Goodman Campus and chairman of the Math and Science Department The telescope was donated by Marlon Davis and is on permanent loan. The observatory could be finished as early as the beginning of the spring semester of the 1994-95 school year.

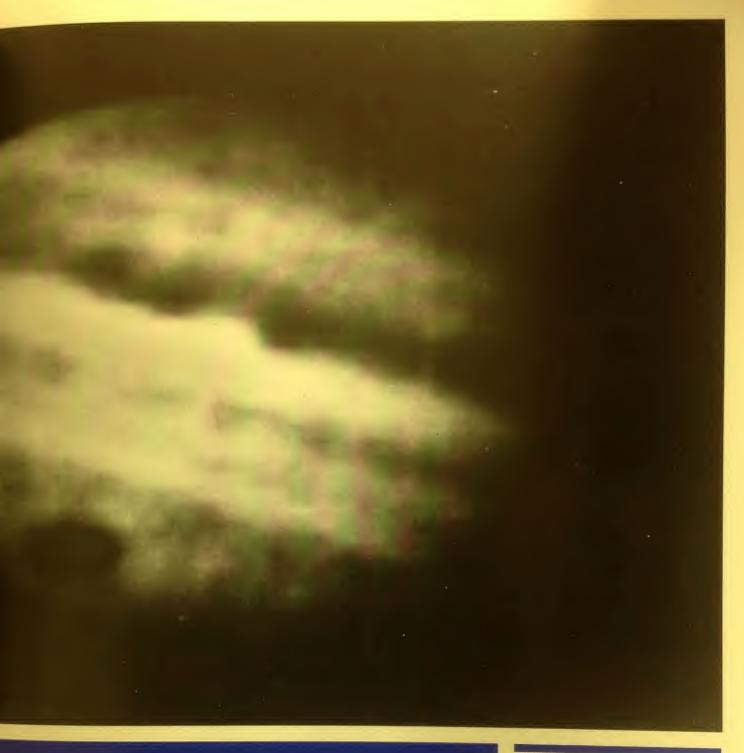

"I feel that this new observatory is a nice addition for the college and the district," quoted Luther Boggan.

There are several photos that were taken by three members of the Holmes faculty: Beta Keramati, physics, Goodman; Kevin Martin, physics, Ridgeland; and Luther Boggan, mathematics, Goodman. The pictures are of an impact by a comet on the planet Jupiter.

They used a CCD, charged coupling device, an IBM compatible computer, and Celestron 14-inch telescope. They were up-loaded onto America On Line, an electronic on

A native of Amory, Hollingsworth taught at Southave High School before coming to Holmes.

At the Grenada Center, she ahs organized the intramural program and worked on the courtyard committee. In addition to school-related activities, she serves as vice-president of the Grenada Garden Club and is a member of the Ole Miss Alumni Association and the Loyalty Foundation.

She has three children.

Robert, a bookstore manager in El Paso, Texas; Karen, who works with abused children in social services in Corpus Christi, Texas; and Andy, a lieutenant stationed in Fort Benning, Ga.

Lil Lovette

Ridgeland Campus sociology and political science instructor Lil Lovette is a lamplighter for a second time. She received her bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of Mississippi.

Lovette has studied, lectured and traveled in Pakistan, Russia and Israel. She enjoys playing with her dog Rebel and flower arrangement.

CAD labs aid students in both academic, technical classes

by Michelle Owen

ave you ever wondered how the space shuttle and other space equipment were designed and built? Computeraided drafting, which is better known as CAD, plays a major role in bringing ideas to fruition in many industries, including the space industry.

Computer-aided drafting, as its name implies, is drafting done on a computer. CAD involves using specialized computer software to create designs. Using a computer allows flexibility to try new and different designs. Computers are also faster and more versatile. That is why drafters are beginning to rely more on computer-aided drafting.

"Because of CAD, drawings may be done more efficiently and accurately. What used to take days to drawup by hand now takes just a small amount of time on a computer," said Bobby Gibson, drafting and design instructor on the Goodman Campus.

The efficiency, detailing, and accuracy are why most students prefer CAD over drafting by hand.

Amy Porter, a student in the drafting and design technology program on the Goodman Campus, said, "CAD helps to save a lot of time. We began drawing a house by hand at the beginning of the semester and we are still working on it at the end of the semester. If we draw a house on the computer, it takes half as much time."

Quinon Norwood, also a student on the Goodman Campus and president of VICA, a national organization for vocational and technical students, agrees, "CAD makes the whole learning process go a lot faster. The work is much

Although CAD is wonderful, the program does have one or two drawbacks as one student found out the hard way.

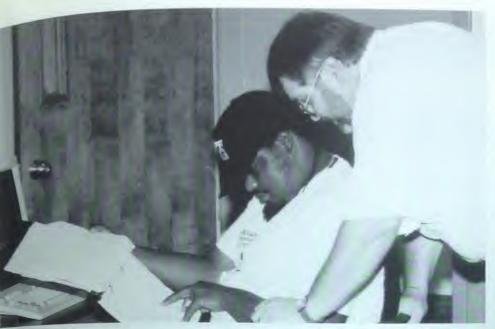

"If you don't save your drawing, then it's gone forever," said Brian King, a student on the Goodman Campus.

Although most of the designs the students work on now are of geometrical figures, machine parts and houses, as they acquire more experience they could move to careers in designing parts of the space shuttle and other equipment used in space exploration, including the mechanical arm used to retrieve satellites from outer space.

The options of work areas for students graduating from the drafting and design technology program include many occupations, from inspecting buildings to assisting architects and engineers. Who knows, one of Holmes' students might help design a city of the future in outer space.

History changed as Eagle landed

by Tavetta Kincaide

To most Americans alive on July 20, 1969, the first moonlanding was probably one of the most interesting events that took place in their lives. Recalling this historic event was definitely no problem for Mark Rummage, a history instructor at the Grenada Center of Holmes.

"I was watching it, like most of America, on television. The image was a little bit fuzzy—remember, they were broadcasting live from the moon, and ours, like many tv sets at the time, was in black and white. Later, our whole family went outside, when it was dark, and just stared up at the moon.

Many people I've spoken with indicate they did the same thing—just going outside and looking up, wondering at it all," stated

Rummage.

Americans knew what they saw on the television screens in front of them was part of a much bigger picture. They knew, as they watched the lunar module of NASA's Apollo XI land and heard the lowkey announcement, "The Eagle has landed," they were watching history in the making.

"It was extremely important. This was the final act in a drama going all the way back to 1957. We had beaten the Russians to the lunar surface. We had put a man on the moon-and now all of America, all the world, wondered what they would find there. We all had our own hopes that something unusual would turn up, and in the event that rocky, dusty moonscape was a bit of a let-down," said Rummage.

These same Americans had been watching in 1957 as the Russians made history of their own with Sputnik I and they were anxious to see NASA and the crew, consisting of Neil Armstrong, Buzzy Aldrin and Michael Collins, not only meet the achievements of the Russians but to surpass them.

"For NASA, the moon landing was the culmination of years of frantic, often danger-filled efforts to fulfill John F. Kennedy's promise that 'we will go to the moon.' The Soviet success in 1957 with Sputnik I scared a number of western governments, touching off a race that America ultimately won. That' the dual nature of the Apollo XI mission: on the one hand, it was a magnificent first in the annals of human exploration, surpassing even the Renaissance voyages of discovery; on the other, it was a massive piece of one-upsmanship over the Soviets, a dramatic feature of the Cold War. The moon landing cemented NASA's leadership role in the space program until the problem-filled 1980's," explained Rummage.

Landing on the moon had been perceived as something almost mythical for so many centuries that once it was a reality, it made anything seem

"It has given us a window on the uni-

ourselves. Not least, possible.

"The moonlanding convinced many Americans that it was possible to leave the earth for other destina-

in one of his better monologues, the moon landing may have raised expectations too high; now, as Seinfeld explains it, people are always griping: 'If we can put a man on the moon, why can't we do ____? You fill in the space. The point is, people are so accustomed to the achievements of NASA they forget the incredible effort involved in putting someone in orbit and safely returning them, let alone going to the moon. It's a very costly, dangerous enterprise," said Rummage.

The landing is an important part of history. But it isn't a part of history that seems remote. In fact, the space program touches our lives in numerous ways every day.

"Space exploration has expanded the range of technology available to us—so many commplace items from calculators to microwaves can be traced back to it.

"Also, it has given us a window on the universe and ourselves. Not least, it holds the promise of adventure—the last great voyages of discovery," concluded Rummage.

A match made in heaven

by Veronica Harvey

Space and mathematics are a match made in heaven. Space has been the main catalyst for the advancement of mathematical equations.

Sue McKay, a mathematics

instructor at the Grenada Center of Holmes, said, "In 1957, the Russians put Sputnik into space: this made the United States realize that we needed to improve our knowledge of mathematics." Due to the damage cosmic rays cause to the transitors in the

computers when they are placed in space, equations are used to build better computers.

Two mathematic equations are used in this process. The Monte Carlo equation is used to predict the physical stresses the cosmic rays inflict on the computers and nonlinear partial differential equations are used to determine the behavior of these cosmic rays on the computers.

Mathematics lights the way to a better life for all of us and enables us to learn more about the world we reside in.

"Space has effected equations in chemistry, physics and engineering." said McKay.

Space is an important facet of our mathematical curriculum and it will continue to push us to strive for better excellence in mathematics.

Ridgeland instructor Brantley, Goodman student Myers receive recognition from state lawmakers igher Education Appre ciation Day Working for Academic Excellence, also known as H.E.A.D.W.A.E., was begun in 1988 by state representative Cecil Simmons. He organized this day to recognize outstanding faculty members and students from each college. The honorees are invited to spend the day at the state Capitol. There, they are presented to the Senate and the House of Representatives and they are also given a luncheon in their honor.

The year's representatives from Holmes Community College are Mary Brantley and Angela M. Myers. Recipients of this honor are chosen by a committee which is appointed by Dr. Starkey A. Morgan Sr., president of Holmes Community College. Teachers are then chosen on the basis of outstanding instructional merit. The student is selected according to his or her grade point average and the difficulty of courses he or she is taking.

Angela M. Myers

Mary Brantley

Now in her ninth year as an English instructor with Holmes Community College, Mary Brantley received her bachelor's degree in English from Millsaps College in 1975 and her master's degree in English from the University of Mississippi in 1978.

The Ridgeland Campus instructor is a member of the Mississippi Humanities Council's Speaker Bureau and lectures on "The Literary Genius of John Grisham."

Her articles published include "The Poetry of Alice Walker" in Masterpieces of African-American Literature and "The Color Purple" in Masterplots of African-American Literature.

She was selected as one of Holmes' representatives to the Lamplighter Program for Excellence in Teaching in 1991. She is a member of the Mississippi Community College Creative Writing Association and its board as well as the South Central Modern Language Association.

A resident of Madison, Brantley is a member of St. Richard's Catholic Church and a volunteer with the Mississippi Museum of Art. She has two children, John, 13, and Kate, 9.

Sixty-sixth commencement gives students opportunity to set future goals, reflect on past achievements

Robert G. Clark, Speaker Pro Tempore of the Mississippi House of Representatives, encouraged the graduates, in his address at Holmes' 66th Commencement held on the Goodman Campus, to set goals and remain focused on those goals until they are achieved.

First elected in 1967, Clark is tied with only two other present members in continuous House service. He was the first black legislator in Mississippi since the Reconstruction era. He was elected in January 1992 as Speaker Pro Tem, an office established in 1987 by House members.

The Holmes County native represents House District 47 in Holmes, Attala and Yazoo Counties. He makes his home in Ebenezer and is a farmer and businessman. A former classroom teacher, coach and principal, he has an undergraduate degree from Jackson State University and a master's degree in education from Michigan State University. In 1979 he was a teaching fellow of the John F. Kennedy School of Government at Harvard University.

Casey Wallace, a pre-medicine major from Mendenhall, received the M.C. McDaniel Award. The Hall of Fame member served as secretary for the Goodman Campus of Phi Theta Kappa as well as president of the Wesley Foundation. She was also a member of the concert choir, The Holmes Connection!, Coachmen, the Baptist Student Union, Student Government Association and Math and Combined Sciences Club. She was named a beauty in the annual beauty review. A Massey Scholarship recipient, she was selected for All-State Choir.

Rost was a member of the marching band, concert band, concert choir, Delta Psi Omega, The Holmes Connection!, Phi Theta Kappa and Holme-Towne Players. Named a favorite as a sophomore, he served as vice-president of Math and Combined Sciences Club.

Kosciusko native Thomas Carter was named Outstanding Phi Theta Kappan for the Kappa Alpha chapter of Phi Theta Kappa. A pre-medicine major, he served as president of the Goodman Campus chapter of PTK. He is a recipient of a Massey Scholarship and a Board of Trustees Scholarship. A member of the Baptist Student Union and Math and Combined Sciences Club, he was elected to the Hall of Fame. He served as a tutor in English and chemistry and was a member of the Scholar's Bowl team as a freshman.

Dawn Kendall, a secondary education and English major from Cascilla, received the Outstanding Phi Theta Kappan Award for the Alpha Mu Beta chapter of Phi Theta Kappa. She served as secretary for PTK at the Grenada Center and was a member of the Creative Arts Club.

The Outstanding Phi Theta Kappan Award for the Alpha Lambda Sigma chapter of Phi Theta Kappa was given to Sheila McGraw, who spoke on behalf of her fellow graduates at the ceremony. A business administration/accounting major from Bentonia, she was named to the Phi Theta Kappa All-State Academic First Team. A recipient of a President's Scholarship, she served as both reporter/historian and president for the Ridgeland Campus chapter of PTK.

Named valedictorians of the class of 1994 were Wendy Creel of Bentonia, Dawn Ellison of Lexington, Leah Haley of Goodman, Chris Terry of Kosciusko and Wyatt Tullos Jr. of Clinton.

Kosciusko native Molly Simpson was named salutatorian.

HOMECOMING 1994

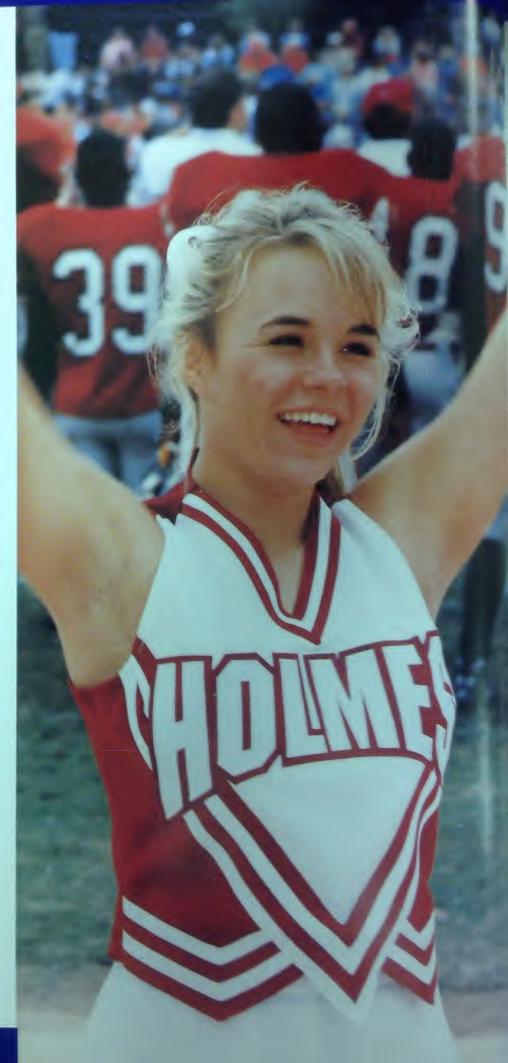

Homecoming: not just a day, but a week-long adventure

by Peggy Carter

October 8, 1994, was an exciting day which capped off an exciting week. The week contained many activities. 'Pajama Day' started out our week with Dell Miller and Erica Lewis being named the best dressed. Angel Albin was the nerdiest nerd on 'Nerd Day.' On 'Hippie Day' Gene Dismuke could not have been a better "Flower Child." Mourning on 'Death to Delta Day' were Angela West and Elizabeth Cranford.

The students did not dress alone; the faculty went all out too. Faculty awards went as follows: Pajama Princess, Billie Joyce Pool; King Nerd, Robert Harris; Hippiest Hippie, Dwight Myrick; and Most Magnificent Mourner, Janice Richardson. There was also a bedroom slipper contest with Resie Liberto winning the most unusual slippers prize and Gwen Studway winning the cutest slippers prize.

Dressing up was not the only activity taking place Homecoming Week. A football search kept students following clues throughout the week until Resie Liberto and Kelly Carver found the hidden bounty. On Wednesday night, a scavenger hunt was the highlight. Two teams, Stacey

Murphey and Heather Stegall; Candice Edwards and Michele Keith, tied. According to Linda Alexander, director of student activities, "Participation this year was the best since I have been here." The bonfire held Thursday night was also exciting. According to Dane Taylor, "The bonfire was fun because I got to burn the Trojan."

Preparation on signs to be judged on Homecoming day could be seen all during the week. According to James Brooks, Student Support Services Counselor, "The judging this year was a lot closer due to a lot of hard work and time put into the displays." The Holmes Connection! took home the $200 monetary gift for first place, with Phi Beta Lambda receiving $150 for second, and BSU receiving $100 for third. Other clubs represented were PTK, the cheerleaders, ACES, Goodman Student Government Association, Ridgeland SGA, and Grenada SGA.

Another highlight of homecoming day was the presentation of awards to some very outstanding people. Shirlie Lobmiller, Wetumpka, Ala., resident,

The Sports Hall of Fame recieved five new members this year. Charlie Howard, a head basketball coach at South Panola High School in Batesville, played basketball for the Holmes Bulldogs from 1977 to 1979. Howard was chosen Mississippi Junior College Player of the year and All-Region XXIII his sophomore year at Holmes.

Boaz, Ala., native Wayne Sims made NJCAA All-American, Los Angeles Times All-American Index, and the Wigman Junior College All-American list in 1957 while playing for Holmes as a quarterback.

Ode Burrell turned to coaching after receiving an injury in professional football. Burrell is currently coaching at Gulf Coast Community College. While at Holmes, Burrell received designation of Junior College All-American and champion of the states 200 yard track competition.

Beauties and the Beach: Holmos goes tropical for annual competition

by Tifani Gallaway

Poise, charm, and natural beauty are three characteristics one must possess to be classified a true beauty. This was definitely the case at the 1994-95 Holmes Community College Annual Beauty Review.

One would have to leave Mississippi and travel to the Carribbean to experience the mood that was felt by the beautiful set designs' colors and decoration of the evening. A Carribbean effect was created with the use of palm trees, pineapples, tropical fish, stars in the sky, a colorful tropical water fountain and topped off with girls as beautiful as you would find on any white sanded Carribbean beach. As you can tell from this description, the theme of this year's pageant was "Carribbean Evenings."

Participants in the pageant were Angel Albin, Michele Arender, Sheila Beckwith, Emily Beidleman, Leah Blakely, Stacey Boyd, Michelle Britt, Maria Brown, Dana Burell, Meagan Cole, Rebecca Delbouno, Mandy Grantham, Christen

Havens, Keisha Hogsett, Sherra Hovas, Dominica Lewis, Manza Lindsay, Mandy Link, Judy Mai, Joyce Mitchell, Nicki Pace, Cindy Perkins, Melyn Prewett, Tanya Roberts, Lindsay Rose, Suzanne Smith, Natalie Sykes, and Susanne Sykes.

We were entertained by the participants at the beginning of the pageant with dancing to Carribbean sounds. Each girl was wearing white shorts, tropical colored shirt, and bright smiles.

At the beginning of this entertaining performance, Dr. Starkey A. Morgan Sr., President of Holmes Community College, introduced Teresa Dillon, Mrs. Mississippi 1993-94, as the Mistress of Ceremonies for the remainder of the pageant.

After the introduction of the judges, Dillon presented the contestants in their casual wear followed by their formal wear.

The audience was then entertained by The Holmes Connection! who presented a dazzling display of song and dance. Their rendition of "Takin' Care of Business," " Can You Feel the Love Tonight" and "Love One Another" was truly spectacular.

The moment we were all waiting for had finally arrived with the annual mountement of the beauties.

nouncement of the beauties. Named as beauties were Sheila Beckwith, Maria Brown, Dana Burell, Most Beautiful; Meagan Cole, Mandy Grantham, Christen Havens, Melyn Prewett, Lindsay Rose and Susanne Sykes.

From blades to reels: Students find ways to entertain themselves

by Tamera Davis

his year has been packed with a lot of wonderful entertainment that has been enjoyed by many students at Holmes Community College.

They enjoyed activities such as going to see a movie, listening to music and reading books, just to name a few of the students' favorite pastumes.

Some of the movies that were enjoyed most this year were based on books. Three of these were classics brought back to life, such as "Little Women," by Louisa May Alcott; "The Three Musketeers," by Alexander Dumas; and "The Jungle Book," by Rudyard Kipling.

Other movies based on books include "The Client," by John Grisham; "Disclosure," by Michael Crichton; and "Interview with a Vampire," by Anne Rice.

Going to see a movie has been an ever popular activity for several decades, but it seems like people went to see more movies this year.

"Drop Zone," starring Wesley Snipes; "Streetfighter," based on the popular Ninendo game and starring Jean Claude Van Damme; "The Lion King," Disney's animated new feature; and "Legends of the Fall," starring Brad Pitt and Aidan Quinn; were a few more great movies. Jim Carrey brought many laughs from audiences this year with "Ace Ventura, Pet Detective," "The Mask," and "Dumb and Dumber," depicting his musual personality and wit.

There has an some really good music product this year. With groups like of Base, Boys 2

Men, Aerosmith and Bon Jovi, students enjoy a wide variety of music. Not to mention that country music is still a favorite of many. Clint Black, Reba McIntire, Little Texas and Vince Gill are some of the top ranked country music vocalists.

"Days of our Lives" remains one of Holmes students' favorite television shows. Other favorites include situation comedies "Mad About You" and "Friends," while Fox's nighttime soap operas "Beverly Hills 90210" and "Melrose Place" remain highly watched also.

Anne Rice's series, "The Vampire Chronicles," has become a favorite of both students and faculty at Holmes. Stephen King's new book, "Insomnia," and Michael Crichton's books "Jurassic Park" and "Disclosure," along with John Grisham's two latest books, "The Client," and "The Chamber" were other favorites of Holmes students.

Other activities that students at Holmes enjoy include reading magazines, watching videotapes and playing games in their dorm rooms. Some of the popular magazines include "Cosmopolitan," "Essence,"

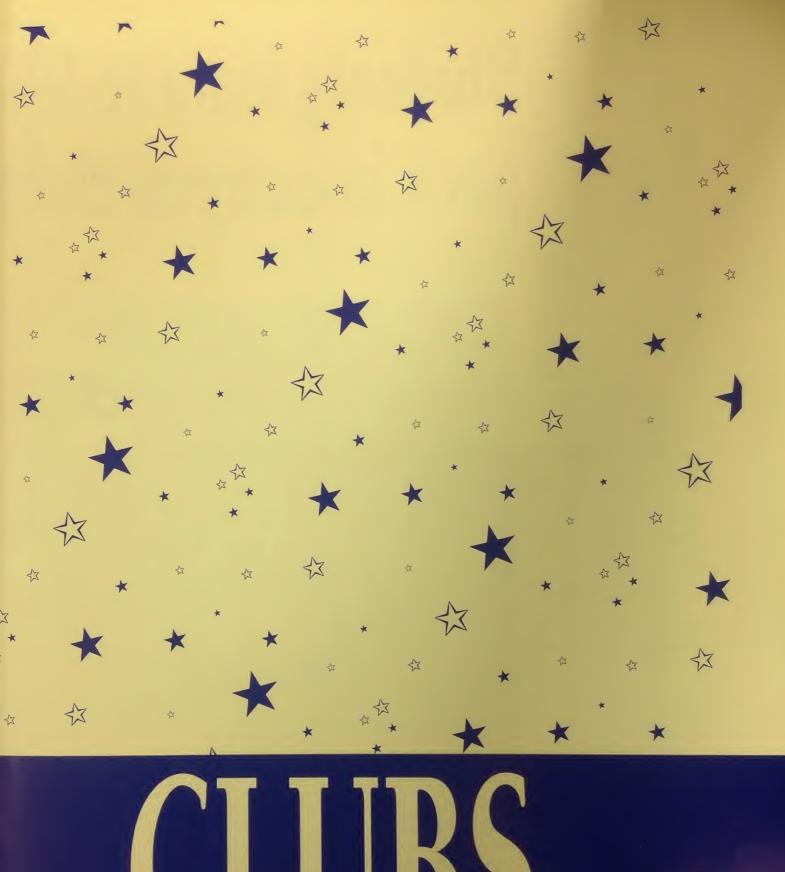

Stacey Walker looks at some of the more popular compact discs, including Bon Jovi's latest hit.

"Glamour," "Ebony," "Seventeen," to name a few.

Games that are popular among dorm students include Nintendo games, card games and Taboo.

Another activity enjoyed on the Goodman Campus of Holmes is the ever-popular rollerblading. Almost anytime someone looks out their window, they are likely to see a group of rollerbladers racing with each other or just cruising around campus.

his year at Holmes, a lot of emphasis has been placed on helping students develop their leadership skills. There are four major organizations which emphasize leadership roles at Holmes CommunityCollege. These organizations are The Holmes Ambassadors, Phi Theta Kappa, ACES, and the Student Government Associa-

The Holmes Ambassadors is a new group at Holmes this year, with 11 sophomores representing the Goodman Campus. These students are responsible for helping recruit future students and to promote other activities on campus.

"The typical Holmes Ambassador is an enthusiastic, energetic student who exemplifies the qualities of an emerging leader on campus," notes Janice Richardson, adviser of

he Ambassador program on the Goodman

The Holmes Ambassadors tour visiting high school students who are interested in attending Holmes, write letters and cards to prospective students, visit area high schools and serve as hosts for special events.

"I think it is fun being able to go out to area high schools to meet and recruit seniors," said Brian Hayes.

The members of The Holmes Ambassadors are very active at Holmes. They participate in a wide variety of clubs and activities on each campus, including the Baptist Student Union, Phi Theta Kappa, the Student Government Association, and many other clubs and organizations. These students are very involved in almost every aspect of Holmes Community College and that is why they are able to serve the college as ambassadors so

The members of Phi Theta Kappa, the international honor society for community and junior colleges, have been very busy this year at Holmes. The members of this group have participated in many activities that will help them both scholastically and socially. This summer, some of the members of the Goodman Campus chapter of PTK toured the Phi Theta Kappa International Headquarters in Jackson. The students were able to learn more about the foundation of their organization and were provided with information that helped them to discover their roles in Phi Theta Kappa.

PTK International has chosen as their service project of the year to be Mental Health Awareness. They will provide students with information about mental illnesses which can be very helpful to students who are dealing with a person, whether family member or friend, with a mental disorder or who may have to deal with mental illness later on in encouraged to participate in the new leadership class offered. The class, taught by Julia Williams and Jim Williams, is designed to help students become more involved on campus and to discover and develop their leadership abilities at Holmes.

The Kappa Alpha chapter of PTK held their annual Sidewalk Cafe during Homecoming Week, in which desserts that were provided by the members were sold by faculty members. The faculty members served students and other faculty members their desserts, waiting tables and wearing aprons. PTK donated half of the proceeds from the Sidewalk Cafe to Richie Rabe for research on Duchenne's Muscular Dystrophy. The other half was donated to St. Jude's Hospital

Members of PTK also attended the Regional Conference held in Tupelo in February. The conference included a scrapbook competition, an essay competition, and skits based on the Honors Topic Presentation. PTK International has chosen Science and Humanity as their Honors Topic. As part of the study, the group watched the movie "Jurassic Park" and invited other students on campus to watch it with them.

"This year we have a lot of outstanding members that are dedicated to improving our campus as well as our society," noted Buffy McElroy, president of the Goodman Campus chapter of Phi Theta Kappa.

Assisting, Counseling, Education for Students, also known as ACES, is another leadership organization at Holmes. The club, sponsored by Fedder Williams, transfer counselor, is very involved in community service, focusing its projects in our area.

"Before you join ACES, make sure that you want to be involved, because we are a very busy organization," said Williams.

At Christmas time, they gathered at Lexington Manor and celebrated with the residents there. Early in the spring the visited the Lexington Headstart program and helped the children there plant trees. Their membership is small, but the group is twice the size it was last year.

Keisha Hogsett, president of the group, added, "It will help the members socially as they grow older. They will learn how to make positive contributions without necessarily receiving something in return."

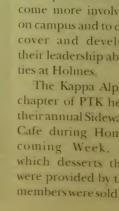

The Student Government Association serves as a liaison between the students and administration. The organization also leads various activities on campus in order to involve students with their campus and fellow students.

SGA sponsors activities on campus such as contests, Skate Night, Parties in the Can, Movie Night, the annual beauty review and many other activities that students can enjoy at Holmes.

"Being in SGA has put me in a better position to communicate with other students," said Laura Rea.

There are many opportunities to be a leader or develop some leadership skills at Holmes Community College, all one has to do is look and then join.

Many students have found being involved in these organizations to be very interesting. fun, and helpful to their lives and involvement with other people.

Students travel far, reach out to others

by Elizabeth Ann Watson

aptist Student Union every summer sends students on mission trips around the world. There are 95 positions statewide this year. The students can select three places out of the United States and foreign countries they would like to

The BSU raises the money during the year to help send the students on the trips. The members of the BSU have set a goal of raising $4,444.44 for missions.

The students interested in going on missions trips have to go through the process of filling out an application and then they are interviewed by Christy Carley, Baptist Student Union director, and Christen Havens, mission chairman. Then the students go to Clinton for the state interviews.

"Our goal is to send 95 in '95," said Carley.

Several Baptist Student Union members also went on a mission trip during spring break to Fort Lauderdale, Fla. There were involved with Beach Evangelism and worked in churches.

Last summer BSU sent Christen Havens and Vista Townsend on mission trips. Havens said that leaving home for a summer was a giant leap for her since Virginia is a long way from home.

"That's where God wanted me to be those nine weeks," Havens said.

She learned that missions is not only for faraway places, but that anyone can be a missionary at home in Mississippi also.

Townsend said that this summer when she decided to go on the mission trip, it was a big step for her to take.

She said her attitude was, "Here I am God; teach me what I need to know.

In addition to helping other people on the mission trip, Townsend said the trip helped her to overcome her shyness. She added that if she had given into the fear and not taken a leap of faith in signing up for missions, she would have missed out on going to Gatlinburg, Tenn., for the most awesome summer of her life.

Brady Richardson and Cortney Thomas along with Dr. Samuel O. Massey and six other Massey scholars went to Jamaica 70

last July on a different kind of mission trip. They worked at a clinic where they registered and treated Jamaicans who otherwise could not afford proper medical attention.

Their 12-member crew including three people from Chicago had to deal with harsh conditions and pushy patients eager to ge in to see one of the two physicians. They were able to treat about 600 Jamaicans and distribute over 400 pairs of glasses at no charge

Despite the harsh conditions, Thomas and Richardson agreed that they wouldn't trade the experience for anything.

While in Jamaica, they stayed at the Crystal Springs Resort. The said the oceans were very beautiful and very cold.

"I plan to return to the island either with medical team or as J tourist," added Richardson.

"Our goal is to send 95 in '95." -Christy Carley Baptist Student Union Director

Stage fright not found at Holmes

f all the world's a stage, then Holmes is certainly no exception. And the members of Holmes' performance-related organizations, Holme-Towne Players, Delta Psi Omega, Marching Band, Concert Band, Jazz Band, The Holmes Connection!, Coachmen, and the Concert Choir, certainly prove that they love the stage.

These students return again and again to the stage, whether it is in McDaniel Hall Auditorium, the Fine Arts Auditorium, or on the football field. These performances are an integral part of the campus life.

It just wouldn't be fall without seeing the band perform at halftime of the football games or seeing the Holmes-Towne Player's fall production. And it wouldn't be spring without their spring production and the Pops Concert, which includes performances by the Concert Choir, Coachmen and The Holmes Connection! And Christmas just wouldn't be Christmas without the annual Christmas Concert.

This year the drama department selected three melodramatic one-acts to perform for the fall production. Under the direction of Rita Jones, the productions, including "Double Take at Beatrice's Boardin' House or Things Ain't Always What They Seem;" "Run to the Roundhouse Nellie (He Can't Corner You There);" and "The Adventure of the Clutching Claw or What's the Mater Alma?" were as humorous as their titles.

"Double Take at Beatrice's Boardin' House" is the story of Beatrice Goodale, played by Kim Spence, caught between losing the boarding house, which is her only source of income, and marrying Luther Swett, evilly portrayed by Chris Cochran, who has made a fortune in dirty deals.

Much of the humor was supplied by Stephanie McCombs as Beulah Mae Forbush, "a cranky old boarder who borders on being deaf," and Eddie Esters as Mortimer Taylor, "mainly a mortician, but mostly a mild mannered man." Jeff McDonald's character was transformed from an ugly woman, Augusta Worthy, to the hero who saves the day. Monica Henley played his "twin" sister as Adelaide Worthy. Jeff Gunalda traded in his football uniform for a judge's robe to play Judge Obidiah Colvin.

In "Run to the Roundhouse Nellie (He Can't Corner You There)," the cast was much smaller but no less effective. Although Johnny Papisan had only a short time to prepare for his role as Hugo Swindle, he was as dastardly as melodramatic villains come. Few who saw his performance could forget that evil glee in his eye. Some even wondered how much of his performance was actually acting.

Elizabeth Cranford as Harriet Gauge and Monica Henley as Nellie Gauge were both convincing as the poor, hardworking and easily snowed victims of Hugo Swindle's swindle. Fortunately for the mother/daughter pair, the proverbial white, though not overly bright, knight came to their rescue in the form of Sterling Worth, played for all it was worth by Troy Tumberlinson. Mandy Link brought to life the character of Sheila Baggage, a greedy lady who brings to Glory Gulch her scandalous city ways.

The final play in "A Night of Melodrama" was "The Adventure of the Clutching Claw or What's the Mater Alma?" Set appropriately on a college campus, the play contains all the essentials of a melodrama: the good, the evil, and the proper amount of mystery, intrigue and pasts.

Glen Trute was impressive in perhaps the most demanding role (or should we say roles) as identical twin cousins. Dr. Penrose Playfair (the good)

Fenton Ormondroyd (the evil). The play even demanded the two characters fight, which Trute accomplished with hilarious

Christy Devine played a single character with two sharply contrasting personalities. On the one hand, she was Professor Kranston diligently working away in her lab, and on the other hand, she was Peaches Latour, who was more famous for red dress and feather boa than her snow-white lab coat.

Melissa Norwood's character, Genevieve Astor, was not quite as complex as Christy Devine's, but was equally well played. As the always beautiful and virtuous heroine Genevieve Astor, Norwood proved she could bat her eyelashes with the best of them.

Ashley Vlach portrayed the hero Dick Bestman in the pure and noble manner fitting such a role. As the B.M.O.C., Vlach naturally saved the day and got the girl. Jake Drennan drew upon his experiences as a cheerleader for Holmes to play Timmy Oldfellow, a cheerleader for Wichita Hillside University and Dick Bestman's sidekick.

Tracy Fleming completed the cast as the secretary to the president who held the school together through it all.

Tim Mitchell, Johnny Papisan, Troy Tumberlinson, Juanita Jones, Tracy Fleming, Brian Rone, Felicia Waits, Katrina Clark, Amy Richardson, and Christie Wenger worked countless hours backstage to complete the sets, costumes, make-up and other essential elements of the play.

he band's performances at pep rallies and at halftime of the football games adds to the festive air of such events. But this fall the band decided to take their show to a higher plane. The band was asked by Maestro Coleman Pierce, conductor of the Mississippi Symphony Orchestra, to perform an outdoor concert on the steps of Jackson City Auditorium for the symphony's opening concert Tuesday, Oct. 11.

Under the direction of band director Gary Sheppeard, the band performed music from their halftime showwith the Dazzlers! dancing and the guard performing their routines in stand-still fashion.

The Holmes drumline, under the direction of new assistant band director Clay Whittington, performed cadences and their halftime percussion feature, "Everybody's Everything."

In the spring semester, the jazz band performs at the basketball games and takes their show on the road, performing at numerous high schools throughout the district.

he vocal groups at Holmes Community College keep a hectic pace throughout the year. The Concert Choir, Coachmen, and The Holmes Connection! all perform around the state and beyond.

Within the state, The Holmes Connection! performed at Holmes' annual beauty review in October and at a national convention held in Natchez during their pilgrimage. The show choir also completed a fall semester high school recruiting tour, with stops including Weir, Kosciusko and Ethel.

The annual "Carols of Christmas" performance concluded the first semester for the group. The Concert Choir and Coachmen also performed holiday concerts at various churches in the district.

The highlight of the year was the Concert Choir performance at Carnegie Hall in April. The group spent months preparing for the trip, both with their vocal chords and their fund-raising efforts which included performances, donations and singing valentines, which have become a February tradition around Holmes

While getting on stage in front of an audience may be a small step for some and a giant leap for others, the performances of these groups have become an essential element of Holmes Community College.

Speakers add extra dimension lub meetings provide an opportunity for club members and advisers to discuss upcoming events, projects or conventions. But also they also offer the opportunity to hear interesting and informative speakers related to the purpose of the organization.

Sometimes the programs also include demonstrations. For example, the Goodman Campus chapter of Phi Beta Lambda, the business leadership organization, asked a Clinique consultant in Jackson to demonstrate the proper make-up to wear on a job interview.

For the Cosmetology Club, Jean Bruce of Ackerman and her assistant Pat Hammett demonstrated how NuSkin makes hair, skin and nails look healthier.

Pat Bruce, a management consultant for the national chapter of the Society of Manufacturing Engineers, spoke to the Ridgeland Campus chapter of that organization. Mississippi State University industrial education instructor Chip Bailey spoke to the Industrial Education club on the Goodman Campus.

Dr. John Downer, a family practitioner from Lexington, held a question and answer session about various health issues with the leadership class on the Goodman Campus.

In some cases, the clubs ask members of the Holmes staff to speak on various topics. Holmes' director of admissions Gene Richardson gave a motivational speech to the members of the Goodman Campus chapter of VICA.

Students often encounter inspiring speakers at regional conferences and other offcampus events associated with Holmes' organizations. Several Baptist Student Union members attended the College Student Conference held at First Baptist Church in Clinton where they heard Rob Boyd, paster of First Baptist Church in Indianola, and Keith Tonkel, pastor of Wells United Methodist Church in Jackson, speak.

Holmes alumnus Angela Curtis, a fashion merchandising major, was a featured speaker at a Delta Epsilon Chi leadership conference held at the Future Farmers of America Conference Center in Raymond. The focus of the meeting was career opportunities for graduates of the two-year marketing and management and fashion merchandising programs.

When Phi Theta Kappans from all three of Holmes' campuses gathered at the Old Capitol in Jackson to launch Mississippi's implementation of an international campaign, "Mental Health: Everyone's Concern," they heard both Colleen Reilly, Community Education Director of the National Mental Health Association in Washington, D.C., and Greg Phillips, the director of Mississippi's Department of Human Services.

The keynote speaker for the event was Keith Thibodeaux, director of Jackson's Ballet Magnificat and former child-star of the series "I Love Lucy." Reading from his new book, "Life After Lucy," Thibodeaux described his bout with clinical depression and drug abuse.

As an extension of PTK's service project, the Goodman Campus chapter of the international honor society invited Rose Washington from the Mental Health Association, Region 4, to give students a test for depression as well as other informational materials.

by Tilden Clark

fter completing a mediocre season last year, finishing with a record of five wins and five losses, Holmes Community College Bulldogs football team was planning to play in the 1994 playoffs.

East Central Community College hosted the Bulldogs in their first game of the season. The "Dogs" came out crisp. In this game, the Bulldogs put up 24 points, while holding East Central to 12 points. Also, in this game Holmes had about 300 yards total offense.

Holmes Community College hosted Northwest Community College in their second game of the season. This game was the Bulldogs first home game. Here the Bulldogs were the underdogs. The Bulldogs had not defeated Northwest in over five seasons.

But surprisingly the Bulldogs were able to defeat Northwest by the score of 24-19. In this game, Holmes managed to put up around 300 yards of total offense. After this game, the Bulldogs were ranked number eight in the nation.

The number eight ranked Bulldogs, next, hosted Copiah-Lincoln Community College next. Both Holmes and Co-Lin were undefeated at this time. Both teams battled back and forth, then Co-Lin managed to take a 24-14 lead with less than two minutes on the clock.

Using that "Dog Magic" the Bulldogs were able to come back just at the end of regulation. Because Co-Lin was not a division game, they were not able to participate in overtime. The final score was 21-21. This game knocked Holmes completely out of the national polls.

Feeling crestfallen about their tie with Co-Lin, Holmes prepared to try to defeat Northeast Mississippi Community College.

Coach Glenn Davis, offensive coordinator, said, "In order to stay undefeated we have to beat these guys.'

Holmes did just that. The Bulldogs ran and passed all over Northeast. This game the stats sheets showed 280 yards of total offense for the mighty men from Goodman. Holmes Bulldogs won with the final score of 26-12. After this game, Holmes found itself back in the national polls. They were ranked number 11 in the nation.

Next the bulldogs faced the Indians, Itawamba Community College.

"We have not defeated these guys in while," head coach Robert Pool said. "h about time for us to beat them."

With that in mind, the Bulldogs tried rally, but they were not able to do so. The dogs had under 270 yards of total offen They were able to score only 3 points while giving up 15. In this game the Bulldogs lost the national rank and the first game.

The next game for the dogs was home coming against Mississippi Delta Comm nity College, the reigning national charpions. Delta, just like Holmes, had lo one game.

The Bulldogs tried to come back from a tragic lost, but were not able to do The Bulldogs again were defeated. The game put the Dogs at 2 and 2 in division play. Although the end result was a low the Bulldogs were able to produce on 300 yards of total offense.

In this game, as well as the game again Itawamba, the Bulldogs were plagued with turnovers. They averaged around for turnovers in these two games. The fin score was 3-21.

The next game of the season was again

Pearl River. The Bulldogs were in a mustwin situation. In order to maintain a chance for a playoff berth, the Bulldogs needed a win. The turnover plague was still present. The Bulldogs turned the ball over four times. Three of those turnovers led to Pearl River turnovers. Despite the fact that the Bulldogs had over 300 yards of total offense, they still lost. The final score was 3-21.

Trying to bounce back from a three game losing streak, the Bulldogs traveled to East Mississippi to prove a point. Having gone through three games without even scoring a touchdown, Holmes had nothing but victory on their minds. And victory belonged to them that night. Holmes scored 40 points on their hosts, while holding them to zero.

The Bulldogs then faced Mississippi Gulf Coast Community College, whose coaching staff includes former Holmes athlete Ode Burrell. The Dogs triumphed over M.G. C.C. 34-17.

For the last game of the season, the Bulldogs traveled to Clarksdale where they faced Coahoma Community College. The men from Holmes ended their season on a high note, outscoring their opponents with more than two points to their one in a 38-15 victory over the Tigers.

The Bulldogs ended the 1994 football season with a 6-3-1 record, scoring an average of 21.6 points per game while holding their opponents to an average of only 15.1 points per game.

Freshman running back (#36)Smith Landon advances the ball toward the endzone as the Northeast defense moves in. Smith was second in individual rushing with 81 carries for 281 yards, averaging 3.5 yards per carry. Fred Adams led the Bulldogs in individual rushing with 150 carries for 563 yards, averaging 3.8 yards per carry.

Jones captures Region XXIII MVP honors

Walter Jones, former Aliceville, Ala., high school standout, is the 1994 NJCAA, National Junior College Athletic Association Region XXIII MVP. This recognition follows numerous other major post season honors. In addition to Jones' Region XXIII recognition he is the Mississippi Junior College Athletic Association, MJCAA, North Division MVP; First Team All MJCAA; First Team All-Region XXIII; and Most Valuable Offensive Lineman, North Division MJCAA.

As a freshman, Jones was named to the Second Team All MJCAA and picked up honors as Holmes' Outstanding Offensive Lineman. After starting in all 20 games played at Holmes during his two years, the 6-5, 291 pound lineman will play at Florida State University in the fall.

hen the Holmes Community College men's basketball team, under the leadership of Coach Bennie Kimble, finished up their '93-'94 season with a record of 6-21, they were more than a little disappointed. But the returning sophomores along with the newcomers to the Bulldog squad have certainly come alive in '94-'95.

The word for the season which began with a 81-76 victory against Hinds on Nov. 7 is improvement with a capital I.

But this season's success was actually foreshadowed last season, even with its less than spectacular win/loss record at the end. As the men moved toward the end of the season, a rhythm began to develop between them. And the scores began to show it. A 72-62 victory over East Mississippi Community College; a 92-74 win over Coahoma Community College and a 78-65 victory over Jones County Junior College proved the Bulldogs could not only win, but that they could win handily, even over some opponents that had previously beaten them.

The returning sophomores have been key in this team's ability to turn last year's disappointment into this year's achievement. Ferald Freelon was the team's leading scorer as a freshmen, with an average of 14.1 points per game. A 6'6 post from Grenada, he averaged 6.3 ppg and 3.6 rpg as a sopho-

Another Grenada native, this one coming up the prep ranks through Kirk Academy, Steve Newby returned to the team after averaging 12 ppg, four rebounds per game and two assists per game. His sophomore stats include 10.4 ppg and 2.8 rpg.

Other sophomores include Lary Haralson, a 6'5 post from Yazoo City, who averaged 6.3 ppg and 4.6rpg; Rod Hubbs, a 6'1 guard from Madison Central High School. who averaged 5.3 ppg and 1.6 rpg and Tyrone Kendrick, a 6'0 guard from Madison Central, whose stats include an average of 7.4 ppg and 3.1 rpg. Robert Wilson, a 6'4 post from Canton, who averaged 7.4 ppg and 4.1 rpg; rounds out the return-

The freshmen had their fair share of talent as well. Canton natives Russell Evans, a 6'1 guard, and Kelvin Otis, a 6'7 post, were certainly impressive in their first year out with the Bulldogs.

Evans stats read 14.3 ppg, 6.2 rpg and 2.2 apg. Evans led the Bulldogs in both scoring and rebounds. Otis also looked good with 3.1 ppg and 3.1 rpg.

Not to be overlooked are the freshmen from out of state including Reggie Herman, a 6'4 post from 6'1 point guard from Tallulah, La.; and Mike Roberson, a 5'10 point guard from Woodlawn, La. In their first year hitting the hardwood for Holmes, their stats stacked up as follows: Herman, 3.1 ppg, 2.9 rpg and Landers, 9.0 ppg, 3.9 rpg, 2.2 apg.

Completing their season with a win/loss record of 21-9, the Bulldogs have certainly become a force to be reckoned with.

Freshman Guard Canton ith their third place finish in the north and appearance at the Region XXIII Tournament, the Lady Bulldogs certainly had reason to be proud of their '93-'94 season. But neither Coach Larry Therrell, the returning sophomores or the freshmen joining the team could be described as content to rest on these accomplishments as they headed into the '94-'95 season.

Starting with a 96-42 victory over Hinds in the season opener on Nov. 7, the women's squad from Holmes continued their winning ways and soon established a reputation as a dominant force on the community college courts.

The returning talent has certainly helped the Lady Bulldogs in their quest to be the best. Mahalia McDonald, a 5'8 point guard who came to Holmes after playing for Madison Central High School, was named both All-State and All-Region XXIII as a freshman.

Returning to Holmes after sitting out a year was Keri Watson, a 5'8 guard from Brandon, who also received All-State honors. Also returning to the squad after a year's absence was Latarsha Gray, a 5'11 post player from Yazoo County High School who sat out last year with a knee injury. Likeesha Roby, a 5'8 forward from Kosciusko, received All-State Honorable Mention recognition as a freshman.

The experience of playing on the community college level has also strengthened the talent of Rena Williams, a 6'l post from J.Z. George High School; Veronica Black, a 5'7 guard from Velma Jackson High School; and Audory Haynes, a 5'10 post from Durant.

High School; Candice Edwards, a 5'5 guard from Central Holmes Academy; Anitra Jackson, a 5'6 guard from Little Rock, Ark.; and Claudia Mills, a 5'10 forward from Canton High School.

The women of Holmes Community College's Lady Bulldog basket-ball team put together hard work, dedication and a winning attitude to become a formidable force in the league.

Their strive to continue to improve from year to year has given the team a number of accomplishments upon which to base their next level of achievement.

Last year, they made it to the quarter-finals of the Region XXIII Tournament. This year, they again made it to that tournament. Next year, Coach Larry Therrell and the Lady Bulldogs will be looking to take an even bigger bite out of the Region XXIII and possibly even the national tournament.

And you can bet the Lady Bulldogs' fans will be there to watch them, cheer them on and help celebrate the many victories sure to follow the team as they continue to progress from year to year.

Sophomore forward Likeesha Roby demonstrates superb ball handling as she makes her way around an East Central opponent. Holmes won the game 76-79.

The hours spent practicing their cheers, jumps and stunts are evident when they get in front of the crowd at a football or men's or women's basketball game. Pep rallies are another venue in which they cheerleaders demonstrate the skills they spend so many hours in practice honing.

The practice does not begin when classes convene in the fall, but rather in the unflinching heat of the summer sun. On a number of Saturday mornings when many other students are enjoying the lull between the spring and fall semesters, the cheerleaders are on the Goodman Campus getting ready to cheer on the Bulldogs.

The cheerleaders often attend a camp in the summer where they can learn the newest cheers, moves and techniques.

And those bright, colorful and creative signs that adorn the buildings all over campus during the week before a game are other examples of the many tasks assigned to the cheerleading squad.

So the next time you see the cheerleaders getting the crowd fired up at a football game remember all the hours of hard work they put into it.

Who's behind that mask?

When children attend Holmes' football and basketball games, they are often confused by what is going on the field or on the court. But there is one individual that can keep them laughing—Bully.

Michele Keith, who serves as Bully, keeps the children and all Bulldog fans amused by her antics. Mascots learn their skills at a camp much the same as cheerleaders learn their jumps, stunts and cheers during the summer.

So the next time you a child laughing at Bully's behavior, remember all the hard work and skill it takes to be a successful mascot.

Michele Keith as Bully directs the crowd's enthusiasm for the football team with the Scream Machine.

his year Holmes Community College added women's softball team to the roster of sports offered to students to participate in. Dan Edwards, who also serves as District Coordinator/Supervisor of Grounds, coached the squad.

"It's a lot of hard work because I'm having to get everything set up on the field and trying to get it all done in time for our games. But the girls are great and I enjoy working with them," noted Edwards.

And for the players, not only do they enjoy playing the game of softball, they also enjoyed being members of Holmes' first women's softball team. "It's a lot of hard work and practice takes up a lot of sleeping time, but it is also fun. We'll be remembered years to come as being the first players on the team," said Charee Gregg, a freshman from Tchula.

"But the girls are great and I enjoy working with them."
-Edwards

Naturally, being the first team fielded by Holmes, they didn't have to worry about acquiring a record that is as good or better than last year's, but coach and team alike aspired to do well.

"We have a lot of potential and Coach Edwards thinks very highly of us," said Amy Richardson, a sophomore from Jackson.

Edwards' goals for the season were to just have fun and keep the interest of the girls.

"We hope to do well. I'm unsure of the competition, but we are going to have a lot of fun," noted Edwards.

The girls worked hard all of the spring semester for the games that started in March. With all the two hour practices, four days each week the first girl's softball team certains completed the season with a lot of great memories and special friendships.

Letter from the Editor

Top. Sophomore Natalie Sykes, (standing) editor of Horizons, discusses what the endsheets should look like with an artist from Taylor Publishing Company while he works on preliminary sketches. Above left. A sign at the Taylor Publishing Company plant in Dallas expresses the rule for both Taylor staff members and Horizons staff members: Yearbooks are top secret. Above right. While on a tour of the Taylor plant Sykes (standing) learns more about yearbook production from a member of the Taylor staff.

The 1994-1995 year has been very fulfilling for me. "Small Steps and Giant Leaps" has proven to be true throughout the year. As a graduating sophomore I will be making a giant leap. Some of the ones of you who are freshmen will be making small steps while others of you will be making giant leaps. I hope as you turned these pages you have relived many of the past year's memories. We have tried to make this yearbook ideal for you. I hope you enjoyed it.

I want to thank my wonderful, dedicated staff. Without them this yearbook would have never been completed. Thank you Bryant, Chris, Elizabeth, Heather, Gerry, Michelle, Peggy, Tamera, Tilden and Tifani from the bottom of my heart. Also thanks go to Lacklan McIntosh who contributed a number of photos to this book. To Mrs. Blanton, I owe may sincerest thanks. I don't think I will ever enjoy Dallas the way we did again! For the past two years you have been wonderful to me. You are the best yearbook adviser in the World!! Thank you for entrusting in me the editorship of this yearbook. I'm going to miss you next year!! Mr. Williams, thank you for encouraging me to do what I wanted and allowing me to include my thoughts in your publications! To my mother, Nan Sykes, thank you for always helping me when I needed it. Without you my papers would never get typed. Thanks Mom. I Love You!!

To the students of H.C.C. Isay a big thank you! You were always willing to provide us with our deep thoughts. We appreciated that greatly. Although these views may not reflect those of the Board of Trustees, administration, faculty, or staff at Holmes, they are an integral part of your book. You mean as much to me as my staff does. Without your help our many articles would have never been completed. I also want to thank the faculty and staff for their help in completing our articles. We could not have made our yearbook complete without your knowledge. Special thanks go to Michael Burchfield for taking the photo, with the equipment at Holmes's observatory, of the moon that we used on our cover.

To next year's editor I wish you lots of luck and patience. It seems like you will never get through, but the final product is well worth all the work it takes! It is always hard to say goodbye, but I must do so. Good Luck to the future staff members of the Horizons committee!

Natalie Sykes
